

APPLICATION WRITING

Application letters are written for several purposes. It may be for business purposes, or applying to different jobs, applying for scholarship etc. Application letters should be drafted carefully and should convey the meaning of the letter in a positive manner.

An application letter, often called a cover letter, is your opportunity to create a good first impression on a potential employer. Think of the summary on a book cover that compels you to purchase the book. Employers use application letters in a similar way.

TYPES OF APPLICATION LETTERS

There are two principal categories of letters of application. These two types of applications are used by the job seekers. These are as follows:

- Solicited Application
- Unsolicited Application

1 SOLICITED APPLICATION — اشتہار شدہ درخواست

A solicited letter of application is written in response to an advertisement from the employer. It is of great importance for applicant as he becomes sure that a vacancy is lying vacant with the employer. The candidate also gets formation regarding his qualifications, experience and age in the given advertisements. It becomes easy for the applicant to apply only for the jobs to which his particulars will suit. The main disadvantage of such applications is that the applicant will have to compete with many other applicants. This type of application is very much common in the world.

2 UNSOLICITED APPLICATION — غیر اشتہار شدہ درخواست

An unsolicited letter of application is written for a job which has not been advertised by the employer. The chief advantage of writing an unsolicited letter is the possibility that it will not have to compete with other applications. The applicant can send similar applications to a number of employers at the same time. The main disadvantages of such letter are:

- There is a possibility that no job is available.
- The applicant will have to prove his skills and qualifications.

THE ESSENTIAL POINTS

These are important points that should be kept in mind while drafting a letter of application. These are as under:
